

Moonshine Raiders Tell of Trouble in Knox County

Bailey Boys On Trial In Federal Court On Charge of Resisting Officers On Raid

Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Judge Cochran sentenced James and Beverly Bailey to three years imprisonment for resisting officers.

How five federal moonshine raiders who went into Knox county were forced to leave to save themselves and prevent a pitched battle with moonshiners was told in United States court here Thursday at the trial of James C. Bailey and his brother, Bev Bailey, of Knox county, on a charge of resisting United States officers in the performance of their duty and interfering and intimidating them.

According to statements of the officers, the two Baileys came upon them armed to the teeth, and sought to provoke an encounter, while having several other armed men stationed behind fences and on hills, with rifles and pistols, to back them up. Rather than start a gun battle, which the officers say they realized would perhaps mean the death of all of them they parleyed with the mountaineers and by tact and diplomacy finally were able to make a successful getaway from that dangerous section, which is about 10 or 12 miles over the mountains from Barbourville, the county seat of Knox county.

The tale the officers told was a convincing one, yet the two Baileys asserted equally as emphatically when placed on the stand that their intentions had at all times been entirely friendly, and they pointed out that when the officers started to leave, the younger Bailey permitted, Deputy Marshal Bash, an older man, to ride his horse.

The evidence given by the government officers in the case brought to light, for the first time, the dangers to which the moonshine raiding squads subject themselves in their efforts to enforce the national prohibition laws. When veteran raiders like Chief of the Eastern Division U. G. McFarland and Deputy Charles Winfrey, both bearing many scars of their battles with mountaineers, can be forced to leave a neighborhood because of the imminent danger of death to themselves and their comrades, officials of federal court here said that the risk that the raiding forces often encounter and brave constantly can be well understood. It is conceded by those who are familiar with the history of federal officers in Kentucky that two braver men than these two named are not on Uncle Sam's payroll, yet they took their men away from Hammond's Fork in Knox county, with their work incomplete, because, as Chief McFarland testified:

"Our discretion told us it was the best thing under the circumstances. When men come at you that way it means either quit or fight. We quit. I've been in many close places and I know what it means."

McFarland flatly denied the suggestive question from one of the Baileys' attorneys that he was "frightened."

"Not that for a minute," he replied, "but we knew it was a question of kill or be killed."

Chief McFarland and Deputy Marshal Winfrey gave the principal testimony for the government, while Jim and Bev Bailey were their own principal witnesses, asserting throughout their intentions had been entirely friendly with the officers in every way. The case was hard fought throughout by District Attorney Thomas B. Slattery and his assistant, Clay Kauffman, for the government, and Attorneys A. R. Burnam and G. M. Smith, of this city, for the defense.

Winfrey and McFarland told of the raid that was made into Knox county on December 3, 1918, when a furnace was found on the farm of Dick Smith, which was up Green Briar branch. The still seemed to have been recently removed, the officers said. The raiding force had been scattered out, Deputy Marshal Bash being sent to the Smith house, Samuels going over the hill, and McFarland and Drewry cutting down the timber of the fermenter which had been left at the still. Winfrey left his rifle with Bash at the house and assisted in destroying the furnace, and then went to the house to get his gun with McFarland. The officers stated that the two Bailey boys were there, one with a revolver and the other with a Winchester rifle. They said that Jim Bailey accosted them, and both presented their guns at Winfrey and demanded:

"Which one of you was on that raid up here before? Are you the — who sat down at my mother's table with your coat off and a pistol on you?"

McFarland said that he started to shoot when he saw Winfrey covered by the two men, but he saw that it would be death to both of them, and tried to talk to the men. He said they asked where Bob Young was (Young is a revenue man of London). When told he was not along, he said the Baileys said it was a "damn lie and that the old — was afraid to come along and sent you instead."

The officers tried to parley with the men, and said that seeing what they were up against, they started to go. The Baileys said:

"Hold on, we're going, too," and started down the branch with them. They said that Jim Bailey wanted to know how they got into that territory, and if they found the still, they told him they had not found the still, but had cut up the furnace, whereupon Jim Bailey said:

"I can make more tubs. I've got the still and I dare any man to stick an axe in it."

As they proceeded along, Bev Bailey tried to learn if the officers had a map or if a letter had been written tipping off the still to the officers. He wanted to know who was the captain of the squad and who had the map. He was told that no one had a map and that the officers did not know who had written about the still, as their orders came solely from headquarters.

A short way down the branch, they met William Bailey, father of the boys. The older man yelled out:

"Whoopie, boys, I'm here, too." He had a shotgun, the officers said. Two other men, with pistols in their pockets, were soon met in a fence corner and they dropped in behind, and all proceeded to Baileys' house. There the officers say that Jim Bailey told them:

"If you all want some whisky I'll give you all you can drink and some to take away with you, and I'll show you the still and kill the man who sticks an axe in it."

Jim Bailey had allowed Deputy Marshal Bash to ride his horse from Dick Smith's to the Bailey house, where it was left; then the officers went to a man named Riley for supper, and then to the station at Haven to catch a train for Barbourville. The officers said that Jim Bailey and another man came to Riley's while they were there and went into the kitchen. When the officers had gotten into the railway coach, Jim Bailey came into the car, and flourishing a bottle of moonshine whisky, and with a pistol in his pocket, invited them to take a drink, saying:

"I want to show you fellows some of my whisky and to show you that it's good. I'm a moonshine maker and a moonshine drinker and I want you to see it's good."

The officers wouldn't drink, but Bailey passed the bottle around insisting that they smell it.

Col. Bob Ford, of Middlesboro, who happened to be in the same car, called Jim Bailey over to him and told him he'd offered the whisky to the wrong man, and to go with him back to the other coach. Jim Bailey then followed Col. Ford out, and did not return where the officers were, getting off at the next station to go to his home. Col. Ford was brought here as a defense witness, but was not put on the stand. He told a Daily Register representative, however, that if he hadn't taken Jim Bailey back in the other car he knew there would have been a killing, and no telling how many, for the rear coach was filled with mountaineers, most of them friends of the Baileys.

Attorney Burnam said to Chief McFarland on the stand:

"You'll admit that you were badly frightened, and don't know what happened?"

To which McFarland snapped back the reply:

"No, sir, I do not. I knew that I was in a dangerous situation and kept my head."

1919. And when questioned if any effort had been made to get the sheriff or other officers of Knox county to arrest the Baileys or take action he said:

"It is my information that it is no use to call on them."

Both Officers Winfrey and McFarland were emphatic about the threatening manner that the two Baileys used towards them at the Dick Smith house, and the tact that it required to prevent a free-for-all battle.

Revenue Agent Samuels told of seeing a young man on top of the hill when he saw Samuels coming. Samuels then started back to the Smith house, and saw a bunch of men there and went on down. He saw Deputy Marshal Bash scuffling with a man over a rifle. Bash, who had been left at the Dick Smith house, said that Bev Bailey had tried to take Winfrey's rifle, when it was left in the house and he had taken it away from him. All of the officers declared that Jim Bailey was drinking and Bev Bailey seemed to have been drinking, too.

Jim Bailey, when palmed on the stand by the defense, said that he started up the creek to a shooting match, and stopped by Dick Smith's to get some whisky. He said he met the officers and asked them what they were doing. He said he questioned them about a man who had been at his father's and eaten there with a pistol on him, but learned that he was not in the crowd. Bailey declared that they were all friendly; that he made no effort to interfere with them burning the furnace, and he let Officer Bash ride his horse back, as he was an older man, and he walked. Bev Bailey, who had joined his brother at Smith's, had come there to see what was keeping him from going on to the shooting match after meeting the officers. Bev Bailey admitted on cross-examination that his mother had some whisky at home, but he supposed that Jim did not want to drink it up from her, was the reason he went by Smith's to get some whisky. Bev said he asked who reported the still in their country, but was told the officers didn't know. Jim emphatically denied using any hard words, and both the Baileys flatly denied presenting their guns at Winfrey as both Winfrey and McFarland said they had done.

Both of the Baileys told of going to the state of Washington and then to Oregon after this visit of the officers. Jim Bailey had gone to Tampa, Fla., and returning home for a few days, was wounded. Bev Bailey said that they had been waylaid by Shep and Johnny White, who had shot at them, and they had returned the fire. Bev was arrested at Akron, Ohio, and then Jim came home to face trial with his brother. Bev is married and has a family.

Officers and others from up in the country say that the Baileys and their kinsmen are engaged in a feud with the Whites. There are said to have been several battles within the past year, at one time a train being shot up by the fighters.

The Baileys denied everything the officers had said about daring anyone to cut up their still or attempting to interfere with the officers in doing their duty in any way. Bailey was well dressed, and both were pleasant spoken. Jim is said to have killed a fair officer at Barbourville a few years ago, when the officer pointed a pistol at a younger brother of Bailey. He was tried three times and each time the court of appeals reversed his sentence. Col. Bob Ford, who has been their friend for a long time, finally succeeded in getting the case thrown out of court. Col. Ford and even the officers say that the Baileys and their clan are the most hospitable and friendly people in the world if they like a person.

ARMISTICE DAY HERE AND ABROAD

(By Associated Press)

Impressive ceremonies were held in London and Paris today, the French and British nations celebrating the second anniversary of the closing of the World war and paying tribute to the men who sacrificed their lives during the titanic struggle.

The body of an unknown British soldier buried in Westminster Abbey and a French soldier taken from a nameless grave at Verdun were laid to rest under the arc de triumph.

No ceremonies of a national character were held in the United States, but men who served their country during the war observed the day, which in some states was made a holiday. In others governors issued proclamations pointing out the significance of the occasion.

The United States naval department observed the day by awarding crosses and medals to men who died during heroic work in the war.

CITY OBSERVING ARMISTICE DAY

With the business houses closing at noon Thursday for the Armistice Day, there was a holiday air about the city, the chief attraction being the football game between the local post and that of Berea.

Local musicians and veterans of the late war uniformed, marched to the depot, expecting the visitors to arrive by afternoon train. However, they were doomed to disappointment, word later being sent to the effect that the players and rooters would arrive by truck and auto. The delegation arrived after which there was a parade about the city and a concert rendered at the corner of Second and Main streets.

The march to the battleground followed, and a great football game being played as the Daily Register goes to press.

Pittsburg, Nov. 11.—Protesting against the presence of Mayor Babcock, in the reviewing stand, because the city recently issued a permit for what they termed "A German Tag Day," scores of overseas veterans who took part in the Armistice Day parade here, refused to march past the stand. After vainly trying to make a speech which was drowned by cries of spectators and marchers, Babcock left the stand and the parade proceeded.

THREE CONVICTED IN RAISED BILL CASES

Young Men of Madison County Learn It Is Dangerous To Foo! With Uncle Sam

How dangerous it is to fool with Uncle Sam in any way has been learned by Will Hays and Robert and George Withers, young men, of the Big Hill section of Madison county. All three were found guilty in federal court here Wednesday of attempting to pass "raised" federal bank notes. They will be sentenced by Judge Cochran just before court closes.

These convictions are the result of the appearance at several places in the county last summer of bank notes which were found to be palpably spurious when received by various business men. Bank notes of $1 in denomination had been clumsily "raised" to $10 notes by pasting on figures 10 over the 1 on the notes and otherwise altering them. Hays tried to pass such a note upon A. C. Daniels, a merchant at Kingston, and upon the Welch Department store at Berea, and the testimony showed that Robert Withers tried to pass a similar note upon S. Q. Linnhart, near Berea, and Mrs. Sallie Fowler, who conducts a store at Big Hill. Government Agent Malley and other federal officers are of the opinion that Hays is the one who has been doing the "raising" and that he gave some of the spurious bills to the Withers boys, who are only 16 and 19 years of age, respectively, to try to pass.

The trial of the Withers boys was still in progress when the Daily Register's report closed late Wednesday.

Taylor Lawes, of Big Hill, said he met Robert and George Withers at Berea after returning from his honeymoon in Jellico, Tenn. He told of meeting the boys and they starting out with him and his wife, with the Withers boys on the front seat. He said one of the Withers boys said, "We'd better get a quart of wine," and one of them handed him a pocketbook and said, "The money is in it."

And they got out at Linnhart's and "I told him we wanted a quart of wine. The old man poured out a glass of wine and George told me to drink it and see if it was good. I opened the pocketbook and saw a bill of money in it. I didn't know whether it was good money or bad money. George looked at me and grinned."

And as I'd heard before about efforts to pass some money that was said to be bad, I handed the pocketbook to George and went out and got in the car, and George came out in a minute with a bundle of money in his hand and he and Bob were whispering and talking with one another."

Lawes said he then went on home to Big Hill, and when the sheriff came out he thought it was about him marrying, as he had run away into Tennessee. He said: "I knew that was all I had done they could get me for."

On cross-examination, Lawes said he had a gun laying on the seat of the car, but he wasn't drinking. He said that after he had seen George grin, and he had thought that was up, he gave George the pocketbook that they had given him. Asked if it was wine or cider he had gotten at Linnhart's, he said he didn't know, but it tasted like it had red pepper in it.

Miss Ersie Lawes, sister of Taylor Lawes, said she was in the auto with her brother, his wife and the two Withers boys. She said the Withers boys said they all could ride out. She said Robert and George Withers were whispering and Robert Withers handed her brother his pocketbook and said go get some wine. She said the Withers boys were whispering after they got back to town and talking about how much money they had. She said her brother carried the purse in his hand until they got in the store.

Miss Lawes said on cross-examination that she went with her brother and his wife on their honeymoon. She said she and her brother had not talked over the case. She said she didn't see her brother have a pistol, nor did she try to jerk it out of his hand. She said she didn't remember seeing him waving it around and threatening to shoot his father-in-law if he bothered him.

Mrs. Jewella Lawes, wife of Taylor Lawes, told about the same story of meeting the Withers boys in Berea as she and her husband returned from their honeymoon. She said Robert Withers gave her husband a pocketbook and told him to get a quart of the best wine. She said Robert said to George: "Don't never think I can't work a trick."

She denied she and her husband, and his sister had not talked over the testimony. She said her husband had a pistol in the seat, but had made no threats against her father, William Batcher. She said she was married June 18 at 6:30 a. m.

Guy Neeley, aged 15, who lives at Big Hill, said Roberts Withers gave him a $10 and told him to go to the store of Sallie Fowler at Big Hill and get two pounds of sugar. Neeley said he handed the boy the money and he said he couldn't give the change. He said his mother came and looked at it and said they couldn't change. He said he then looked at it and saw it was a $1 bill with some 10's pasted on it. He said Mrs. Fowler told him to take it back and give it to Robert Withers, which he did. He said he told Robert they wouldn't give him change on it as it was counterfeit. He said Robert Withers had him go with him, telling him he wanted him to set tobacco, but after he came back Robert said it was raining and they couldn't set out tobacco. He said it was raining when Robert hired him, too.

Mrs. Sallie Fowler, who runs a store at Big Hill, told about Guy Neeley coming to her store to buy sugar. She said her son said, "That's a funny $10 bill," so she looked at it and saw it wasn't genuine, and gave it back to Guy.

George Withers, one of the defendants, was then put on the stand. He said he is 16 years of age. He said he and his brother bought a quart of wine from Linnhart for 75 cents and they paid a $1 bill and got back a quarter. He then said then met Taylor Lawes and his wife and they went to Linnhart's for another quart. He told the same story as Taylor Lawes about paying Linnhart for the wine, but said the reason he and his brother were whispering was that Taylor Lawes was waving his pistol and saying he was going to kill his father-in-law, and he was telling his brother to drive fast. He said Taylor seemed half drunk. He said he had never examined the bill he gave Linnhart and didn't know there was anything wrong with it. He said there was no "kick" in the wine they got from Linnhart.

Robert Withers, who said he is 19 years old, told about the same story of meeting the Lawes, and how he gave Taylor Lawes his pocketbook to get wine, as Taylor looked like he was broke. He said after they came back with the wine Taylor seemed like he was drunk, and was threatening to kill his father-in-law if he said anything to him. He said Taylor's wife was crying and his sister had hold of him, too, and that he whispered to his brother to drive fast up the hill. Withers said he had gotten money at several places before that; that Ben Boen had paid him two $10 bills for logging and he had gotten $10 from the bank.

In regard to the Neeley boy's story he said he gave the boy the money to get the sugar, but he brought it back and said it was no good, and that he looked at it then and saw the bill was no good. He said he'd never seen any bad money before that. On cross-examination, he said Boen paid him two $10 bills for logging. He said he'd also gotten one $10 bill at the Berea Bank & Trust Company. Of the $30, Withers said he had spent $19, and he didn't know which was the one he had left. He said he'd gotten all three $10 bills the same day.

Robert Withers admitted he was with Will Hays the day Hays passed a bad $10 bill on Mr. Daniels. They were in the Withers' car. He denied that Will Hays had supplied him with raised $10 bills to be passed. He said he didn't know where he'd gotten the $10 bill that he'd given Guy Neeley to pass on Mrs. Fowler; that after he got back home tore off the 10's that were pasted on it and burned them up in the cooking stove. He told differences in the two spurious bills.

M. B. Settle, of Big Hill, testified that the reputation of both Robert and George Withers for truth and good moral character was good.

J. W. Hudson, near Big Hill, gave the two boys good reputations, also.

This concluded the evidence. Judge Cochran submitted the charge of passing the bill to the jury, which brought in a verdict of guilty for both boys.

DISTILLERY CASES GO TO LEXINGTON

Judge Cochran Says That Some Men Will Break Into Distilleries Puzzles Him

The dozen men who were implicated in breaking into the D. L. Moore distillery near Van Arsdall, Mercer county, and hiding 14 barrels of whisky afterward will not be tried in federal court here. Their cases were continued when called Wednesday shortly after noon, and transferred to Lexington for trial at the term of federal court beginning there January 10. Bonds for the men were renewed for their appearance. District Attorney Slattery agreed to the continuance, upon showing made in affidavits by the defendants that they are not ready for trial now.

Although indictments were returned against all of the men who were caught in the dragnet which was laid by Prohibition Agent Rowan Sauley, of Stanford, only one plead before the court here, the pleas of the others being reserved for their appearance at Lexington. T. B. Kennedy, of Mercer county, pleaded guilty before Judge Cochran. Judge Cochran, however, did not sentence Kennedy. He said that he did not want to take the responsibility at this time of passing sentence upon Kennedy, but will consider his case when the entire bunch of men in the case came up at Lexington.

"It's really a remarkable thing that men who wouldn't break into anything else will break into a whisky warehouse," said Judge Cochran. "It presents an unusual condition. It's a remarkable thing to make and I want to take time to study it and so will not act on this young man's case until the others come up at Lexington. It is understood that a number of the others in this case will plead guilty, too.

There was a formidable array of legal talent engaged in the case, and a number of the young men, and most of them are young men, handsome and well dressed, had wealthy bondsmen here with them to see to it that they did not have to take any chance ongoing to jail. Among the attorneys here for the case were C. C. Bagby, John W. Rawlings, of Danville, and K. S. Alcorn and John Sam Owsley, of Stanford.

A LITTLE CLERK IN A BIG COURT

Of the big list of federal court attaches taking part in the present session of the mills of justice operated by Uncle Samuel, there are three young women who have proven their ability heretofore, but whose ability to cope with situations has been called upon repeatedly since the opening of the session. The entrance of pleas in many cases has created additional work, as well as the setting of cases, records of witnesses, records of the disposition of them and the 101 other things to be looked after as a result of the operations of the attorneys, et al, render their tasks such as to keep them busily engaged during the entire day.

Miss Sara Monday, diminutive clerk in charge of the local offices, takes care of the business with a degree of ease and grace that appeals to all who are called upon to solicit her attention. She has charge of the work as it issues from the big court and receives the numerous attorneys, witnesses and others seeking information, guiding them here and there and furnishing instructions sought. Her familiarity with the work enables her to carry out the many orders and desires of those calling without the least apparent difficulty. She has an intimate knowledge of the records of cases, together with the history of them, and has papers in most in any case asked for at her finger tips, so to speak.

"She the littiest and biggest and best little clerk I ever saw in a big court," said a well known United States attorney, in speaking of the remarkable ability of the young woman. With her this week are Miss Helen Donnelly, clerk to the United States attorney, and Deputy Clerk Miss Florence Hanley. They have their work to do and are given positions and material with which to do it, thus enabling them to keep up with their work while here, eliminating the necessity of reviewing it after they have reached home.

More Evidence Here of Mild Winter Ahead

There is much comment upon the thing corn husks, and this fact, many state, is indicative of a very mild winter. Men husking corn state that for years they have not seen corn, with the large stalks and ears of grain, provided with such thin husks. Squirrels, too, are said to not be industrious towards laying in the winter supply of nuts, since they are to be seen helping themselves from trees, it is said, and carry few nuts to their dens.

PUBLIC AUCTION!

3 Select Madison County Farms

I have been employed by the present owners to subdivide the well known Shelby Jett Farm in Madison county, Ky., into three choice farms and to offer them to the public at the highest dollar on Wednesday, Nov. 24, 10 A. M.

This is a very fertile farm, is very productive and has always been in good hands, owned by a man who wanted to add to the fertility of his soil, rather than to take from it, with the result that it has never ceased to be better and to produce more abundantly as the years rolled by.

FIRST FARM—Will contain about 150 acres, all good land, in highest state of cultivation, is improved by 8 room brick residence, modern conveniences, excellent stock barn and a 10-acre tobacco barn. On this tract will be found every little outbuilding and convenience that any up to date farmer could desire. This was the original home tract of Shelby Jett, deceased, and was improved just to his notion. A beautiful home.

SECOND FARM—Will contain about 60 acres and is improved by good five room dwelling, a large combined stock and tobacco barn with silo at side. All this land is good and will make some man a good home.

THIRD FARM—Will contain about 40 acres and has a three room dwelling and a 10-acre tobacco barn. This tract is practically all first and second Silver Creek bottom land as fine as a man ever walked over. Can be cultivated in corn and hogged down as long as man habitates mother earth and will be as fertile the last day as it is now and will grow hemp or hemp seed enough the first year to pay a handsome dividend on the entire farm.

LISTEN, MEN!

This land stands in a class alone, is of the the very highest type land that Good Old Madison county possesses, is located on good pike. Each farm having good pike frontage, is only one and a half miles from the Kirksville High School which will give your child a 12th grade education without a penny additional taxes, has within two miles three churches of high standing, is only eight and one half miles from the city of Richmond with 10,000 inhabitants, adjoins the farm of the late Joe Simmons, pioneer tobacco man of Madison county, Ky.

A Place for You, January 1, 1921

To those who have sold your homes and need a good farm in a good locality to live, good markets for every product raised (did you know that Richmond boasted of the highest average on tobacco sales of any place in Kentucky, tobacco on this market last year amounted to about 8 million pounds and the average price per pound was over 48 cents. Figure this out and you will not wonder that Madison county is a wealthy county when one crop of tobacco left about four million dollars on deposit in the banks of this county). This farm offers excellent opportunities, is a money maker, is a property that you will always be glad to own.

This will probably be the last sale I will conduct this year and I wish to thank the public for the interest they have shown me during the sale season of 1920. I have had wonderful sales and contribute my success to the fact that I have never taken a farm when the owner wanted more for it than it was worth, and too, I have confined my work to good land from good farms well located, in good neighborhoods, near good schools and on good roads. I have taken a personal interest in each subdivision and have cut the lines on farms so that they would be like the purchaser wanted them and have recognized the lay of the land, the frontages and the situation of the improvements and when my work was looked over I have heard business men say "I do not see a line that could be changed."

I want every good citizen of Madison and Garrard counties, and from other counties, to attend this sale and to those of you who need a home, I want you to come to see this farm, not only one time, but come two or three times and each time you look you will say "it is better than it was before." Close inspection is what this land bears best and is what I want it to have. Don't say I saw it five years ago—SEE IT NOW

Terms will be liberal and about usual and will be announced at the sale, and I am asked to especially invite the man with a few thousand dollars who wants a home and wants a man behind him to see him through.

DON'T FORGET THE DAY, THE HOUR, AND BE ON HAND.

Delightful Birthday Surprise

Misses Frances and Emma Cooper gave their aunt, Mrs. J. J. Embury a surprise birthday dinner Sunday in celebration of her seventy-fourth anniversary. Covers were laid for ten and a delightful menu was served.

D. A. R. Meeting

Today is the second anniversary of the signing of the armistice, a circumstance which unquestionably brought more joy than any one thing that has happened or will happen for centuries. November the Eleventh is certainly the one historical date that all this generation will ever remember.

It was fitting then that the meeting of the D. A. R. this week should have been an Armistice Day meeting, not "Lest we forget," but just that the members should again have the joy of expressing their joy.

The chapter met with the regent, Mrs. Caperton, and she had prepared a delightful program. This was opened by the Lord's Prayer in unison, followed by the American's Creed. Then a very impressive incident, the notes of a bugle sounded and one after another of the bugle calls of the brighter strain was sounded. Clarence Stanifer, who had this duty while in the service, had kindly consented to call the meeting to order in this stirring manner.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee" was sung, led by Mrs. Paul Burnam. Miss Anne DeJarnette read an extract from a paper of November 11, 1918, and Mrs. James Neale had gathered some very interesting data in regard to the American Legion, which was Deceased was the father of Thurmond K. Tudor who died at Stanford a year or so ago. He was a splendid man, a good citizen, and had many friends who are saddened by his passing.

IMPROVE SEED CORN, IS GENERAL ADVICE NOW

Many farmers in the state of Kentucky have selected their seed corn in the field and this is an excellent practice. This corn should receive good care during the following winter if satisfaction is to be obtained. The selected seed should be dried as soon as possible and placed in a granary or attic where it will not be subjected to the sudden change of temperature during the following winter. It is possible to select the corn and leave it in a sack or basket in the barn or crib and have this corn germinate satisfactorily the following spring. However, this does not mean that even if this corn does germinate well that it is going to produce well. The spring of 1918 we had a serious shortage of seed corn and the farmers of Kentucky learned to appreciate the value of the germination tests. As an offset to prevent the recurrence of this trouble farmers should make sure to select their seed corn early, dry it and place it in a dry storage so that it will come through the winter in the best possible condition.

In England the price of gasoline has been reduced as the result of an over production, it being said the supply is almost double what it has been at any former time.

DOWNWARD PRICE SWING IS COMING

Normal Conditions Being Resumed With All Satisfied, According To Trade Reports

Reports reaching the city from the trade centers throughout the country are to the effect that there will be a downward swing in prices generally, beginning at any time, especially in foodstuffs, which are already said to be on the downward grade in many places and still going. Prices of meats and meat products generally are also in the list as well as shoes and various clothing lines.

There is a general tendency to lower prices, according to some dealers and this will terminate in competition bringing the lower price to a universal standard. The other products are said to be decreasing in price in sympathy with grain, since there is a bumper crop in almost every product, and this will cause a continuation in the lowering of prices, said a local man today in speaking of the manner in which the slump in prices was effecting additional lines every day.

Conditions are getting back to normal, although there is a very noticeable shortage of skilled labor, and it is believed there will be no change in this situation, owing to many of the thousands of skilled men among the foreign element who have made sufficient in the country to keep them in luxury in their native land during the remainder of their lives. There were many of them developed during the war, and most of them, reports from big cities say, have petitioned for passports to return to their native homes.

The situation as presented here is similar elsewhere, although there may be few changes in prices, in some cities the prices of shoes especially being far below what they were a few weeks ago. Business is said to have never been better and there is seemingly the same satisfactory results. One business man predicted that if business continued with the degree of satisfaction to both purchaser and dealer, there would be a return to normal conditions that would not work a hardship upon any one.

BETTER Sires MEAN BETTER STOCK; PROOF

A better understanding of what better sires would mean to the livestock industry of Kentucky can be gained by the following: Two pigs, one a scrub and the other by a registered boar, were weaned at the same age of eight weeks. They were kept in the same pen from the time they were weaned until they were six months of age. These pigs ate the same kind of feed out of one common trough and at the end of six months the scrub weighed 95 pounds and the other weighed 200 pounds. The condition and the quality of the pig from the registered boar made it worth more per pound than the scrub, not considering the 105 pounds difference in weight.

LEAF GROWERS TO GO TO WASHINGTON

John W. Newman, chairman of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, has issued a tentative call for a meeting of representatives of all tobacco growers' organizations in the United States to meet at Washington, D. C., December 9, to consider problems common to all tobacco growers. The question of protective legislation will be taken up with members of congress, the federal commission and the secretary of agriculture. The burley organization has been invited to send delegates to the North Carolina and Virginia meetings.

Chairman Newman, who was in the city for a short time, reported that most of the counties were in and those still out were expected to join the movement soon, since it is believed the time has come when all growers realize that co-operation is necessary for their protection.

There were 3,049 registrations during the special registration gain of 197.

TOBACCO GROWERS MEETING SATURDAY

Secretary E. M. Mansfield, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, To Speak at Court House at 1:30

Secretary E. M. Mansfield, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association, reports from Lexington that he will be here Saturday to hold a meeting and to meet with the growers of this county at the court house at 1:30 o'clock. Mr. Mansfield was here some time ago, but owing to there being a political meeting at the time at the place where the meeting was scheduled, was unable to meet local producers.

Madison is one of the very few counties not as yet represented in the association, which is becoming widespread, having a membership including Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina. It is said to be the intention to increase the area and to take in all tobacco-growing states. The organization has headquarters at Lexington and the organizers have been busy for some time in Kentucky. Almost every county where tobacco is produced to any great extent is represented in the movement looking towards better prices and the interest of the grower generally.

Mr. Mansfield is a competent speaker and is well versed in the situation and condition of affairs. He has been at work for some time organizing the county organizations and doing the work of the secretary of the newly-formed organization. There were a number of growers at the meeting called here some time ago; however, they were unable to meet the speakers. It is known that some time ago there were many in favor of the organization, while there were some little interested.

However, since that time there have been many changes in the situation and it is the belief of many that Madison county will line up with the others, since it is recognized as one of the foremost tobacco-producing counties in the state of Kentucky, and it is believed that according to the acreage, more tobacco has been produced, especially during the past year.

BUYS CORN AT $5 PER BARREL

The price of corn, $5 per barrel, is still maintained in Madison county, there being no reduction reported, although lower prices have been reported in other localities. Farmers declare they will have to maintain this price to realize a profit on their product. J. A. Noland has purchased from Jerry Cornelson 200 barrels at $5 per barrel, this being one of the largest sales in this immediate vicinity this week.

NO OBSERVANCE AT SCHOOLS

There was no general observance of Armistice Day at the city or county schools, the regular routine being in order. It was believed for a time there would be special programs rendered. However, the event coming during the middle of the week, or nearly so, prevented any special arrangements being made for the observance of the occasion.

BURLEY GROWERS WILL SOON ELECT DIRECTORS

Articles of incorporation of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association were approved and registered by the secretary of state at Frankfort.

A meeting at Lexington of the signers of the articles has been called for Tuesday at 11 o'clock at the association headquarters in the LaFayette hotel for the purpose of electing directors of the organizations. After their selection the directors will elect officers to serve until the general meeting next March.

School Students Are Discussing Christmas

The first talk of holiday entertainments has begun and the county schools seem to be the source, there being a number of the old time Christmas trees already planned. The plans have not been completed, however they are being given attention, some of the teachers have announced that should it be the desire of their patrons, there will be trees.

Madison county is said to abound in trees of an appropriate size and kind and there would be no dearth of ornament holders. There will be a number of special Christmas berrances at churches in Richmond, while a number have been announced for churches throughout the county.

Captain William Howard, 98, of Jeffersonville, a veteran of the Civil war, is dead at his home in that city.

Mistletoe Abundant Now In Madison

There is said to be an abundance of mistletoe this year, it being in evidence in profusion. The fact furnishes delight for many who contemplates its use during the holidays. Some are said to be arranging to ship a great quantity away for holiday use, the special variety grown in this state being more attractive and longer-lived than that from other localities. In various places, it is said, to be found in great quantities for the first time. The gathering will not take place as yet, it being said that more cold weather is conducive to a longer life to the branches.

At Frankfort there is a crusade against the handbook men and one of them has been fined $2,500 for one in his possession.
